DIVISION 28
AMERICAN PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION

From the President's Desk...

Ask Not. . . !

This is the time of year when APA notifies our membership chair, Ralph Spiga, of the members who have not yet paid their 1998 dues. Undoubtedly, it is the time of year when some of these members are considering whether they will indeed pay them at all. It is no secret that for psychologists who are behavioral pharmacologists, APA dues are high relative to those we pay to our other scientific societies. I imagine many of us have tried to sort out the pros and cons of APA membership at one time or another.

Fortunately, being your President this year has bolstered my own long-held beliefs about the importance of APA to psychologists. Furthermore, it has given me a new perspective to think about: the importance of Division 28 to APA. So, I'd like to make my own pitch to the faint-hearted and maybe to APA, and maybe provide more good reasons for the stalwart to value APA and Division 28 membership. What follows is a potpourri of ways in which I see APA as being important to scientific psychology, Division 28 as playing an important role in APA, and both as providing opportunities for members.

What does APA do for scientific psychology?

- For psychologists, APA long has been THE professional organization, just as the ABA is for attorneys and the AMA for M.D.s. Certain roles are fairly well known: APA establishes standards for accreditation of degree programs in psychology. APA establishes codes of ethics for research with people and animals. APA's Publication Manual has become the standard for psychology as a whole.

- APA has been The Voice for professional psychology in academic, public, and governmental arenas. The APA Public Policy Office (PPO) monitors legislation, regulation, and other initiatives that can affect the funding and methodology of behavioral research. Geoff Mumford, a behavioral pharmacologist, is currently the Legislative & Federal Affairs Officer. In addition to informing members of Congress about potential unintended negative consequences of legislation, PPO monitors and influences text in Congressional committee reports on NIH research. These reports carry a lot of weight in the Executive branch for understanding "the will of Congress." The choice of one word or phrase over another can be crucial to what is communicated about priorities.

Not so well known may be the continuing efforts of the Science Directorate of APA to assure the future for scientific psychology and to foster thoughtful debate about issues important to psychological research.

- For the past two summers, a Summer Science Institute (SSI) has brought together on one campus bright undergraduates to introduce them firsthand to the possibilities and the opportunities of a career in scientific psychology. I was fortunate enough to participate in this program by having students in my lab to learn about behavioral pharmacology research last summer. A happy spin-off of the SSI program is an effort that is underway to provide further support for these students in the summer following their SSI experience to work in laboratories of APA members. Division 28's New Fellows Chair Marilyn Carroll, for one, will have one of these SSI graduates in her lab this summer.

- The Board of Scientific Affairs (BSA) set in motion the establishment of the Task Force on Statistical Inference to examine current statistical practice in psychology. A special focus is the matter of significance testing and its

Public Health In the 21st Century

Atlanta, Georgia
May 7-9, 1998

Multidisciplinary Conference Will Demonstrate The Importance Of Behavioral & Social Sciences in Public Health Issues

Washington, DC-- The behavioral and social sciences have been increasingly integrated into public health and biomedical research, prevention, and treatment programs. In that light, leading researchers in those fields from all over the country will be in Atlanta, Georgia for the conference, "Public Health in the 21st Century: Behavioral & Social Science Contributions." The conference will be at the Atlanta Marriott Marquis Hotel starting on Thursday, May 7 at 1 pm and closing on Saturday, May 9 at 5 pm.

This multidisciplinary conference is being organized by the American Psychological Association (APA) and funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the National Institute on Drug Abuse, the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, the National Institute on Mental Health, the Office of Juvenile Justice and delinquency Prevention, U.S. Department of Justice, the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and the Office of Behavioral and Social Sciences at NIH.

The American Psychological Association has the collaboration of 13 professional organizations which have been the keystone for assuring the multidisciplinary character of the conference. Their representatives on the planning committee have been involved throughout the development of the conference providing advice on program, speakers, materials, and evaluation.

The 13 collaborating organizations are:

American Academy of Nursing
American Anthropological Association
American Association of Geographers
American College of Epidemiology
American Evaluation Association
American Psychological Society
American Public Health Association
Consortium of Social Science Associations
Federation of Behavioral, Psychological, and Cognitive Sciences
Society of Behavioral Medicine
Society for Psychological Study of Social Issues
Society for Public Health Education

Conference Purpose and Topics

The general purpose of the conference is to highlight and demonstrate the importance of applying behavioral and social sciences to disease prevention and control and health promotion. The conference is a major effort aimed to assemble and foster interaction among researchers, and will address behavioral and social science perspectives on prevention of risk factors, interventions and evaluations of STDs, HIV/AIDS, chronic diseases, injury prevention, environmental health, occupational health, infectious diseases, and immunization.

Some of the topics that will be addressed at the conference are:

- Community-based Initiatives to Reduce Substance Abuse
- Mobilizing Communities for Tobacco Control
- Changes of Research with Minority & Ethnic Groups
- HIV Prevention Through Community Involvement
- Cardiovascular Disease Prevention
- Environmental Health Issues
- Physical Activity as a Disease Prevention Strategy
- Mass Media and Public Health Campaigns
- Occupational Health Issues
- Behavior Factors in Immunization
- Social and Behavior Intervention in Violence Prevention
- Injury Prevention
- Maternal, Child, Adolescent, and Elderly Health Issues
- Participatory Methods in Public Health Guidelines
- Evaluation of Public Health Guidelines
- Uses of Technology in Behavior Change
- Ethical Issues in Behavioral & Social Science Research
- Lessons Learned from State and Local Public Health Projects

Who should attend the conference?

This is a multidisciplinary research-oriented conference designed to create active interchange of issues and challenges among scientists coming from a variety of disciplines and experiences. Researchers working on the integration of behavioral and social sciences and public health are the expected attendees.

Registration

Registration forms for the conference with detailed information will be mailed out by mid January, 1998. The cost of the conference will be $90.00 up until April 1, 1998. After April 1, the cost will be $125.00. Space is limited and registration will be processed on a first come, first serve basis. The registration forms need to be sent back to the American Psychological Association. Hotel registration should be done directly through the Atlanta Marriott Marquis Hotel which is offering single or double rooms at the federal rate of $96.00.

Second Open Invitation to Members from Richard M. Suinn, Ph.D., 1998 APA President-elect

My commitment as APA president is to use grass roots input as the foundation for planning. I invite all psychologists and other professionals to help me brainstorm. Brainstorming involves establishing the basis for future plans by creating as many different suggestions, without limiting such creative thinking in any way (such as whether the idea is feasible, too 'far out', etc.)

I have two major interests: 1) ethnic minority or multicultural issues, and 2) cancer. I invite you to brainstorm as a grass roots think tank to generate ideas about how we might meet these two themes-either separately, or combined.

For example regarding what we might do relating to minority issues, some examples of ideas:

- Identify and document epidemiological data specific to cancer among ethnic minority populations,
- Develop a directory of psychologists doing multicultural training in different regions,
- Develop fact sheets of scientific knowledge for addressing issues such as Affirmative Action, bilingualism and educational achievement, stereotyping and stress in the workplace,
- Organize a round table at the APA convention specifically for minority students to directly meet minority leaders, and/or to obtain information on graduate programs with multicultural curricula,
- Provide consultation to state psychological associations written by associations who have a record of significantly increasing minority membership,
- Make APA a more welcoming place by introducing a monthly column written by associations who have a record of significantly increasing minority membership,
- Make APA a more welcoming place by introducing a monthly column in the APA Monitor highlighting a psychologist of color,
- Provide members of the four Ethnic Minority Psychological Associations with a reduced membership rate for joining APA in their first year.

Regarding cancer, some examples of ideas:

- Develop coalitions with other professional organizations ...
- Organize a public meeting prior to the APA convention at a community building, with panelists who are psychologists, nurses, insurance representatives, etc., to address the public's questions about what to expect from cancer, psychological interventions for side effects, needs of family as supports, how to make decisions, research findings, etc.
- Write a series of feature articles for media releases and for the APA Monitor that informs the public about the many ways in which psychologists contribute to cancer issues.
- Develop plans for funding through federal agencies aiming at a goal of integrating scientific knowledge, community education, training of psychologists and other health professionals regarding psychological aspects of cancer,
- List research programs in a document organized by type of cancer, or by type of cancer, or by other classification (research on vulnerability, on treating side effects, on prolonging survival, on quality of life, on medical decision-making, etc.
- Write brochures that help patients deal with the psychological impact of cancer or offer a Web-site information help line connected to experts,
- Suggest curricula for training of psychologists to work with cancer.

These are but a few examples that illustrate the broad range of potential action-ideas that I am encouraging. Out of such brainstorming will evolve plans, some of which I may be able to achieve alone, many of which may demand a partnership with you to take on some elements.

We can readily identify the problems, what we need is to brainstorm possible actions that move us toward possible solutions!

When you brainstorm, think also about how we can do coalition building. Note that some of the sample ideas speaks to connecting with non-psychology professionals. Should we be considering a coalition with nurses, with community organizations, etc. -which ones, and how they help us and we help them in these topics?

As you thin about, dream about, have a sudden insight about, brainstorm ideas for either of both themes, send them on to me before you forget. Be sure to identify yourself, and how I can contact you in the future. Feel free to distribute this invitation broadly to others.

Wildcard Plan Accepted by the Membership

by Ronald F. Levant, Ed.D., APA Recording Secretary

The "Wildcard" by laws amendment was approved by the APA membership with an overwhelming margin of 77%. With 14,937 ballots cast, 11,450 APA members voted for the plan.

This plan, which resolves a 50 year-old tension between divisions and state associations over representation in APA Council (which was the focus of heated battles in the last 15 years), will go into effect for the 1998 Apportionment Ballot which will, in turn, change the seating for the 1999 Council.

The way it works is as follows. First the Apportionment Ballot returns will be counted as they normally are and seats assigned accordingly. Then 48 new "wildcard" seats will be distributed to state associations and divisions based on the proportion of the vote that they got (which is typically 2/3 division, 1/3 states). Within each group, the allotted seats are distributed first to units who do not have a seat, and, if there are any seats left over, to units that came closest to getting a next seat. This plan is expected to seat all divisions and all but the smallest state associations. For states, this will be a dramatic improvement over the present situation where less than half have a seat.

This plan also offers an unprecedented opportunity to increase the ethnocultural diversification of the APA Council of Representatives. Units who gain a seat could consider filling the seat with an ethnic minority person; and units who gain additional seats might consider following the lead of several divisions who are using slating procedures to ensure ethnic minority representation.

This plan was hammered out by an extraordinary group of people, the Task Force on Council Representation, that I had the honor of chairing. Representing all major constituencies in APA, they were able to both represent the interests of the constituencies and also see what would be in the best interest of the Association overall; Ron Fox, representing the practice divisions, who taught us the principles of "interest-based bargaining" and walked us through the mediation exercise, Ray Fowler for his assiduousness in coming up with a succession of plans, including the wildcard plan; Neal Johnson and Bruce Overmeir, who represented the academic scientific community, Janet Matthews and Suzanne Bennett-Johnson, who represented the scientist-practitioners, Lynn Pantano and Mark Peterson who represented the states, and Janis Sanchez-Hucles who represented public interest.

I also want to acknowledge the folks who drafted plans for the task force to consider: Art Kovacs, Don Freedheim, Bill Foote, Mark Peterson and Bill Foote, for keeping this issue in front of Council for so many years.

I believe that this solution will dramatically improve the way that we do business as an Association.

CARE Compendium

APA's Committee on Animal Research and Ethics (CARE) is building a compendium of purely basic research with animals. This research has led to unanticipated applications, strategic outcomes, and genuine new knowledge. Application, though possible was not necessarily the primary goal of the research project. The overall objective is to highlight the importance of basic psychological research with animals. CARE is soliciting input for this project from the academic and research community. Please send descriptions, detailed examples (if possible) and annotated citations of basic research with animals that have resulted in direct and sometimes unanticipated applications. The data compiled will be available, on request from the Science Directorate.

Information may be sent to Sangy Panicker, APA-Science Directorate, 750 First Street NE, Washington DC 20002; Fax: 202.336.5953; e-mail: sxp.apa@email.apa.org alternatives; but many other issues are being considered. Given the distinguished make-up of this task force, its reports should be influential. Steve Fowler, a Division 28 Fellow, is our liaison to monitor the work of this task force for Division 28.

- The six-person Committee on Animal Research and Ethics (CARE) safeguards responsible animal research, reviews standards for the ethical conduct of this research, and disseminates accurate information about animal research. One venue for education is the recently updated APA Research with Animals brochure. Over the years, many Division 28 members have served on this committee. Marilyn Carroll and Linda Spear, Division 28 Fellows, are currently serving 3-year terms. During my own CARE tenure, we began preparation of a manual to be a resource for psychology professors at small colleges who use animal subjects. We also initiated a project to prepare short video segments on areas of psychological research that use animals, which will be distributed through APA's Teachers of Psychology in Secondary Schools (TOPSS).

What does Division 28 do for APA?

Just as APA represents psychology as a profession, Division 28 represents psychopharmacology within APA and is a primary representative of this specialty research area in general. Division 28, through its MEMBERS, serves as a resource to APA for expertise on the behavioral effects of psychotropic drugs, including drugs of abuse, and on behavioral toxicology.

- The role of Division 28 members as a repository of expertise has been highlighted by aspects of the efforts to gain prescriptive authority for clinical psychologists (as chronicled in recent newsletters). In addition, APA Council voted in August to authorize the College of Professional Psychology (CPP) to prepare an examination to be available to states that vote to grant prescriptive authority to psychologists. It has been gratifying to see the way in which Division 28 has been called upon to help in the effort to assemble a panel of experts to oversee the development of this exam (more on this next time).
- On another APA initiative, our liaison to CPP, Maxine Stitzer, participated in an expert panel that developed an exam through which psychologists can earn a Certificate of Proficiency in the Treatment of Alcohol and Other Psychoactive Substance Use Disorders from the APA College.
- Division 28 has actively fostered the development of continuing education workshops presented at the APA convention. These have included Cigarette Smoking Cessation (Marlyne Kilbey as lead organizer), Scientific Basis of Drug Abuse Treatment (Maxine Stitzer as lead organizer), and Psychopharmacology for Adults (Carolyn Mazure as lead organizer).
- Division 28 has been a resource to PPO in its advocacy work through Science Advocacy Training Workshops. After training, the attendees actually go to Capitol Hill to discuss critical issues at the offices of members of Congress. Last fall such a workshop focussed on tobacco research issues and included Division 28 members Warren Bickel, Dorothy Hatsukami, Lynn Kozlowski, Ovide Pomerleau, Saul Shiffman, and Maxine Stitzer.
- Recently, as President of Division 28, I helped represent APA at a dinner meeting of the National Substance Abuse Coalition, an umbrella organization spearheaded by the ABA and the AMA to foster nationwide initiatives to address alcohol, tobacco, and illegal drug problems (more on this elsewhere in this newsletter).
- Recognition of the repository of expertise within Division 28 comes up in various ways, from being called upon to nominate candidates to serve on a government-sponsored panel to evaluate the pharmacotherapy of depression to suggesting people who could provide information for articles related to drug treatment in the APA Monitor (you may have seen Division 28 Fellow Irwin Lucki quoted on the use of St. John's Wort).

What does APA and Division 28 do for members?

- For many, the Division 28 convention program and hospitality suite have provided a great opportunity from year to year to catch up with each other's research, meet new colleagues and renew acquaintances, sort out opportunities to become or to engage a postdoctoral fellow, present data ourselves or provide such an opportunity for our trainees, etc., etc., etc. These programs not only provide an opportunity to focus on the research of our Division per se but from year to year branch out to link up programming with other Divisions and APA program initiatives. This year's program chair, Nancy Piotrowski, is no exception (see article elsewhere in this letter).
- The Division 28 electronic bulletin board provides the opportunity to post job openings or needs, to exchange research information on particular topics, and to stay abreast of issues and opportunities posted there by the PPO's Geoff Mumford, including the opportunity to comment on proposed new NIH standards for grant review, the opportunity to be considered for inclusion on newly-reconstituted NIH study sections, and the timely opportunity to comment on legislative initiatives.
- Various award programs sponsored by APA and by Division 28 provide more opportunities for recognition than many members are aware. We know of the APA Distinguished Scientist awards, one of which was won by Division 28 member Bob

National Substance Abuse Coalition

On January 13th, a dinner was held at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. to recruit new members to the National Substance Abuse Coalition (NSAC) and to preview a new documentary series on substance abuse that will be aired in March on PBS. NSAC is an effort spearheaded by the American Bar Association and the American Medical Association to bring together a diverse group of professional organizations (e.g., the American Association of Children's Residential Centers, the National Association of Social Workers, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce) to develop and implement strategies to address alcohol, tobacco and illegal drug problems and their consequences on local and state levels as well as nationally. The Coalition drafted a Mission Statement in May 1997, which over 30 national organizations have endorsed. A major focus is to have member organizations educate their constituencies about substance abuse and addiction; but they also have chosen addiction treatment parity as the priority policy issue for this year.

APA was one of the early participants in this effort, and James, "Gil" Hill Director of the APA Office of Rural Health has been serving as the liaison to the coalition. He invited the Presidents on Division 28 and 50 to help represent APA at this national leadership dinner, along with Jan Ciuccio of the APA College of Professional Psychology. Close to 50 organizations were represented; and displays included materials for APA and Division 28. Government officials including Alan Leshner, Director of NIDA, and members of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, participated.

The highlight of the evening was a presentation by newsmen Bill Moyers and his son, William Cope Moyers (Director of Public Policy for the Hazelden Foundation), who is in recovery from substance abuse. Bill Moyers collaborated with his wife Judith (President of the firm that produces the Moyers' documentary series) to produce the documentary series "Moyers on Addiction: Close to Home," which will air on PBS in March. They have also produced sets of educational materials on substance abuse for families, schools, and community leaders and are using the airing of the documentary as the kick-off to an outreach campaign. NSAC is participating in these outreach activities by encouraging member organizations to raise the visibility of substance abuse by including it in programs in their national meetings in the coming year.

Schuster and the Division 28 Wyeth-Ayerst Young Psychopharmacologist award, won last year by Craig Rush. Less known are the multiple annual Dissertation Research Awards. (See elsewhere in this newsletter for information on this year's winners.)

- When you do pay your dues, you get a journal credit, which for Division 28 members generally has been used on "our" APA journal, Experimental and Clinical Psychopharmacology, which has been edited by Division 28 Fellow Bob Schuster. There are also discounts on APA books and journals; you receive the APA Monitor (which recently carried quotes about drug treatment from Division members Irwin Lucki, Steve Fowler, and Dan Egli), the American Psychologist, and the Psychological Science Agenda newsletter (which profiled Division member Christine Sannerud). You get to post on Division 28 electronic bulletin board, and you will get to sign up for the new CARE Animal Research Information Board.

The names of various members of Division 28 have been sprinkled about in this piece not just for news value but also to point up the opportunities that members have to participate in projects and influence issues that are important to them. Although one can't say that the lunches are really "free," APA is very good at providing sustenance to committee and board members during their hours of deliberation! For many, such meetings also provide an opportunity to visit our Nation's Capital (and for runners, a chance to follow a route around the monuments!). Particularly for more junior psychologists, the opportunity to be active and to become known can be valuable for professional development and advancement within their departments and the field. The opportunity to achieve recognition by being voted to Fellow status is valued by many psychologists (and their chairs).

Ask what YOU can do for APA and Division 28!

Pay your dues! Participate!

A Note from the 1998 Program Chair

I am delighted to inform the Division 28 membership of our plans to co-sponsor a mini-convention with Division 50 (Addictions), and involving the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and a number of participating divisions. Both NIAAA and our two divisions are looking forward to this programming as a way of highlighting important alcohol (and connected other drug related) research and treatment activity. This programming will provide a way of highlighting how substance use connects with a wide variety of behavioral research realms of interest to APA members (e.g., basic research, prevention, neuroscience, the integration of behavioral and pharmacological treatment methods, epidemiology, managed care, etcetera).

In addition to the NIAAA mini-convention, I am pleased to announce our participation in the HIV/AIDS mini-convention with the contribution of a symposium high-lighting recent treatment advances in the area of HIV/AIDS and substance abuse treatment. These events promise to be of outstanding quality. I hope you will make every effort to join us in San Francisco for these very stimulating events, August 14-18, 1997.

Nancy Piotrowski

Congratulations to Paul Czoty

Paul Czoty, a graduate student at the University in Atlanta, has won one of the APA Dissertation Research Awards. The Dissertation Research Award competition is sponsored by the Science Directorate to assist approximately 50 science-oriented doctoral students of psychology with research costs. Paul's dissertation adviser is Division 28 Fellow Leonard Howell, and his dissertation project is on how serotonin systems can regulate the reinforcing effects of cocaine. Paul plans to use the $1000 prize to purchase supplies to conduct the microdialysis studies that are a critical component of his research project.

Call For Nominations

The American Psychological Association (APA) invites nominations for its 1998/1999 awards program. The Distinguished Scientific Contribution Award honors psychologists who have made distinguished theoretical or empirical contributions to basic research in psychology. The Distinguished Scientific Contribution Award for the Applications of Psychology honors psychologists who have made distinguished theoretical or empirical advances in psychology leading to the understanding or amelioration of important practical problems.

To submit a nomination for the Distinguished Scientific Contribution Award and the Distinguished Scientific Contribution Award for the Applications of Psychology, you should provide a nomination form, nominee's current vita with lists of publications, letter of nomination, up to five representative reprints, and the names and addresses of several scientists who are familiar with the nominee's work.

The Distinguished Scientific Award for Early career Contribution to Psychology recognizes excellent young psychologists. For the 1998/99 program, nominations of persons who received doctoral degrees during and since 1989 are being sought in the areas of behavioral and cognitive neuroscience, perception/ motor performance, social, and applied research (e.g., treatment and prevention research, industrial/ organizational research, and educational research.) To submit a nomination for the Distinguished Scientific Award for Early Career Contribution to Psychology, you should provide a letter of nomination, nominee's current vita with list of publications, and up to five representative reprints.

To obtain nomination forms and more information, please contact Suzanne Wandersman, Science Directorate, American Psychological Association, 750 First Street, NE, Washington, DC 20002-4242; by phone, (202) 336- 5953; or by E-Mail, ssw.apa@email.apa.org.

The deadline for all award nominations is June 1,1998.

Are You Ready for the Aging Revolution?

Did You Know?

- The number of people 65 and older has tripled since 1900?
- Today, 13% of the U.S. population is 65+ or older, & by 2030, that figure will increase to 20% ?
- Most older people live independently?
- Short-term memory shows little age-related decline & older adults benefit from regular mood and memory checkups?

APA President Norman Abeles, Ph.D. and the APA Working Group on the Older Adult Brochure have developed a booklet to help you learn more about psychological interventions for this rapidly growing segment of the population and how to tailor your practice to best meet their needs.

To obtain your free copy of What Practitioners Should know About Working With Older Adults, call 1-800/374-3120, or email ljo.apa@email.apa.org.

From the Editor's Desk

In this issue of the Division 28 Newsletter I have included the membership directory. This directory was generated from the mailing list provided to me by APA. During the past year, many of you have contacted me directly concerning corrections. I have made every effort to incorporate these changes in order to ensure that the current membership directory is accurate. However, to ensure that these corrections are permanent, I encourage you to contact APA directly. If I can assist anyone regarding this matter, please do not hesitate to contact me.
